Abstract:

The Hampton Roads regional travel demand model will undergo a model validation over the course of the next year. The most recent validation was for the year 2000 and air quality conformity regulations state that a validation of the model must be made (see 40 CFR 93.122) “....for a base year which is not more than 10 years prior to the date of the conformity determination.” Validation refers to the model’s ability to replicate travel in the region. The model validation effort is being headed by Virginia Department of Transportation modeling staff in Richmond with involvement by HRTPO staff.

To assist in this effort, HRTPO staff has geo-coded recent residential and employment data with the goal of determining totals by transportation analysis zone (TAZ) in the region. This was done for both the rural and urban areas in the region. TAZ’s are small-area geography used in the travel demand model; there are approximately 1,100 TAZ’s in the region (urban and rural). This task was included in the FY 2010 UPWP as a part of Task 9.1, Transportation Air Quality Planning.
